Buffalo Will Got Its Franchise, So the Story Goes.

"Confirmation of the sale of players of the Louisville club comes from among members of that organization, who have been here for several days," says a Washington dispatch in the Philadelphia Record, "According to their statements, Tom Brown, the captain and center fielder of the Louis-villes, has been sold to the New York club, and Fred Pfeffer, who has no peer as a second baseman, has been sold to Pittsburg. The last time he pitched against Baltimore—and the only time this season until yesterday was when the Louisville club was last in the east. Upon that occasion Hanlon's men knocked him out of the box. Yesterday they didn't. The Menefee of yester-day was practically invincible. He had lots of speed, a great slow ball and a curve that he simply fauned across the plate whenever he wanted to."

The action of the Pittsburg club in releasing Merritt and Glasscock occasioned much surprise. Glasscock was released because in the opinion of the club owners he has seen his best days, and will not be able to hold his own in the league another season. Merritt was released because a better man was secured to take his place. He is Buck Weaver, late of the Louisville club. Weaver, has been with the Louisville team since 1888, a man who can catch, play first or the outfield. Ehret and Weaver were the star battery of the

The scoring yesterday was less frequent and tedious than usual, and the horses were sent away in better order. The system of starting the horses in each race in successive heats was adhered to and again proved a success.

The first race was an easy one for T. H. H, which was entered instead of Grover by Joseph Hull. The winner was protested before the second heat on the ground that it did not belong to a club member. It was charged that the horse is owned by Thomas H. Hull and no denial of the allegation was made. Mr. Crawford, the judge of the course, took no action upon the charge.

DR. THROOP'S VICTORY. That venerable kinsman was greeted with a salvo of applause as he drove his handsome bays on the track preparatory for scoring for the team race, With him in the road top wagon sat Frank Merrifield. The hand of the doctor was as light, firm and skillful as that of any of the experts who drove during the afternoon, and the way neid his big trotters level was beautiful to behold. The race was an easy one for the doctor, both heats being trotted without a slip or a break of any kind, The fight for second place was spir-ited, J. R. Mears securing it in the first heat and C. M. Sanderson in the second. The time, 1.26 and 1.30, was excellent, and the doctor only needed formen worthy of his steel to make it even better.

SPLIT HEATS IN THE THIRD. The third race possessed more interest than its predecessors from the fact that three heats were necessary to deside it. Fanny Blair showed up in rare form in the first heat, none of the others being able to extend her. Frank H. made a bold bid in the first quarter, but a bad break settled his chances. When the word was given for the second heat, Abigail went out like a bullet. Bounding the turn at the eighth, she was a length to the good.
